AFTER MANY YEARS.—When a young clerk in his uncle's drug store at Mexico, Mo., fifty-two years ago A. W. Bascom broke a bottle a piece of which was imbedded in the palm of his hand at the base of the thumb. One day last week Dr. Walden cut out the glass.

SLATE AVENUE.—"Have you been out on the Avenue lately?" "No, it is not safe to walk out that way."

"We are sorry that this is the case, but it is good for driving, and you people surely do kick up a mighty big dust when you drive out that way."

What is the matter with Slate Avenue? Is it not within the corporate limits of Owingsville? It comes to me that the tax man never fails to say so. But—and there is where it sticks.

Slate Avenue is the street which is the real entrance to the town. Nine out of every ten strangers who come here come in from Preston on this Slate Avenue.

"First impressions are usually most lasting," and those gotten on Slate Avenue are the first and last a visitor sees. The whole town should take a pride in seeing it one of the most attractive and beautiful streets in town. But, alas, we have nothing.

Main Street seems to be the only one that is seen by our city fathers. It has no more than it should have, to be sure, and we would not have anything taken from it, even to get it ourselves; but a fire cistern would help mightily good to us, especially as there are so many frame houses so close together on our street.

It would protect us more and reduce our rate of insurance too. We have some lights to be sure, but where are they? If you look away up in a tree you'll see them. If you were in the Cemetery you would think they were lightning bugs. They give but little light where they are.

Not one; no, not one. It seems that mud and dust are quite good enough for dwellers on Slate Avenue. Walk out our way and you see our sidewalks, which are an abomination in the sight of man and almost to God. They are regular pitfalls and liable to cripple some of our people.

Along the fences and walks are weeds growing higher than your head. They are covered with dust inches thick. These too are a menace to the health and life of the town.

Then I saw here there are more telephone poles to the square foot than anywhere on earth. These are the electric wires and poles on both sides of the street. They are not pretty to look at by any means and those not to be sighted but removed, giving more room for teams to pass each other along the street.

Whenever it rains the water stands in pools and floats the board walk, so that we are compelled to wade in water or walk in mud in the middle of the road or walk the fence to get over these things ought not to exist. We do not want to complain, but we do feel that the streets could be done with fewer sweepings and some of the time and money be spent on our street. We would be glad to have more weeds and other things removed.

Many who own property on the Avenue do not live out there, so we are not conscious of the conditions existing. No one street should be made beautiful to the exclusion of others.

Slate Avenue people are ever ready to do their part, but we need help.

Then, whose is the fault? 'Tis true that most of those who live on Slate Avenue are poor. Many of us, however, own our little homes. We have no automobiles nor carriages. We don't give many swell dinner parties nor lunches, but we love our homes and our street and though we are not rich in worldly goods we are rich in that which the world can not take away.

Our hands are ever ready to help those who need help; our feet are swift to go to the bedside of those who are sick and afflicted and to do errands of mercy. Our hearts are sympathetic and full of compassion for those in distress, and we have rights that ought to be respected.

The winter draws near. The children have to go to school and something must be done for our street. We can not wade through mud and water all winter.

We invite the Mayor and Council to walk out our way by day and then come again some dark night. If we know when they're coming we'll give them a warm reception. All we want is what we ask is to be treated fairly. We are ready to do our part and ask that we be given the encouragement and assistance due us. Hoping to see the good work begun, we are truly yours for a more attractive and beautiful Slate Avenue.

MISS METCALFE'S CANDIDACY.—Miss Pickett Metcalfe presents the people of Bath county her claims as a candidate for the office of County Superintendent.

Miss Metcalfe was elected to this office three years ago, and under her management and supervision the schools in Bath county have shown wonderful progress and improvement. She is well qualified for the office which she holds, and to which she asks to be re-elected, for she not only holds the regular County Superintendent's certificate but also holds a State certificate of high grade.

The three years of experience which she has gained in this office have prepared her for the office of valuable service to Bath county in one of its most important offices. It is a fact and worthy custom in most counties, and in our scientific Commonwealth that an officer who faithfully performs his duty shall be rewarded with a second term. That Miss Pickett Metcalfe has made a faithful effort in the discharge of her duties, and the cause of education generally, can not be denied. She has devoted all her time and energy to this cause, and this is something that can be said of very few County Superintendents.

To sum it all up: Miss Metcalfe is worthy; she is qualified; she is faithful; and Bath county needs her in that position. Why not re-elect her? She asserts that she will not be a candidate again. Let others get out of her way and give her a clear field.

FROM LOGANA, KY.—Jesse Amine county is needing grain very badly. Early corn is very good, but late corn will not make more than a half crop. Hemp is very good, all cut and ready for seed. What little tobacco grown is very good, and housing is going on. Wheat made an average of four and a half bushels for the county. Wheat sowing is at hand.

There is not much grass nor much demand for live stock because of dry weather. Hogs are at $4 to $5 per hundred; good hogs and mules from $250 to $400 per pair.

We like to hear from all correspondents, especially Moore's Ferry and Salt Lick, so I hope the correspondents will hustle up the news.

Yours truly, WALTER FANNING.

REFUSED LICENSE.—A couple, the man about 40 years of age and the girl 16, applied to County Clerk Leslie Shroat last Thursday for a marriage license. The girl said she was 22, but refused to make affidavit to that effect and license was refused in consequence. They were from Clark county.

MORMON CONFERENCE.—There will be a Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Harper's school-house Saturday night and Sunday.

There will be some fine speakers. Everybody cordially invited.

Geo. F. Elsworth, Pres.
